

Contents

Introduction	1
French Colonialism and the Nineteenth Century	1
Colonialism and the Rise of the Novel	5
What do We Mean by ‘Realism’?	8
Romantic Exoticism and Realist Colonialism?	11
Reading the Colonies into the Metropolis: Some Conceptual Tools	13
‘Offstage’ Spaces in the Novel	14
Colonial Metaphor and Colonial Metonymy	17
Internal Strain in Realist Verisimilitude: the effet d’exotisme	19
A Literature of Doubt: Hesitations over Colonialism	21
Balzac, Flaubert, Zola: Colonial Projects	25
1. Imported Objects	30
The Dualism of the Imported Object	30
Polemical Uses of the Exotic and Fantastic within Realism	31
Capitalism: the Object within a System of Exchange	35
The Object in Colonial Context	38
Consumer Objects, Fragmentary Vision, and the Quest for the Oriental Absolute	48
2. The Real Cost of Sugar: Ethics, the Slave Trade, and the Colonies	56
Eugénie Grandet , Sugar, and the Slave Trade	60
Women as Slaves and the ‘commerce d’hommes’	64
Crime at a Distance	70
Slavery and Autocratic Pastoral	75
Colonial Guilt and the Tainted Fortune	78
Zola’s Colonial Experiments and the Ethics of Distance	82
3. The Great Imperial Scam	86
Oriental Luxury, Metropolitan Fraud	86
The Debunking of Magical Money	91
Balzac and (Failed) Colonial Fraud	94
Daudet, Tunisian Debt, and the Ambivalent Stockbroker Hero	97
Zola’s L’Argent , the Stockbroker Hero, and the Middle East	100
Maupassant’s Bel-Ami : an Anticolonial Novel?	106
Colonial Fraud and Critical Orientalism	110
4. Critical Orientalism: Misreading and Miswriting the Colonies	113
Misreading: Exotic Bovaryism in Flaubert and Daudet	115
Miswriting: Orientalism and the Invention of the Colonies	124
Narrative Embedding and Geographical Disjunction	129

Framed Narratives: Balzac's Anti-Travel Tale, the Voyage de Paris à Java	133
Framed Narratives: the Penal Colony and Zola's Ventre de Paris	137
Critical Orientalism and Self-Consciousness	141
5. The Black Maid and Her Mistress	144
Manet's Olympia : Interpreting the Black Maidservant	147
Manet and Zola	151
Zola: the Black Maid and Abject Femininity	153
Flaubert: the Black Maidservant as Red Herring	158
Blackness between Myth and History	165
6. The Primitive Within	167
Balzac: La Cousine Bette and the New Urban Proletariat	171
The Colonial Origins of Metropolitan Violence: Embedded Narratives in Balzac, Maupassant, and Zola	176
Thérèse Raquin : Colonial Inheritance before Heredity	181
The Racial Other goes Underground: La Bête humaine and the Born Criminal	185
Dualism: Zola's Feral Victor and his Bourgeois Father	191
Zola, the Experimental Novel, and Epistemological Doubt	196
Conclusion: Colonialism, Postcolonialism, and the Realist Mode	200
The 'Unknowable Other', or the Problem with(in) Realism	201
Anxiety and the Dissolution of the Self	206
From Colonial Naturalism to Modernism	208
The Realist/Modernist Debate and Postcolonial Fiction	210
Bibliography	219
Index	243